Thanks to the generosity of IRTF supporters, full-time volunteer IRTF associates Sophie and Wilber were able to participate in human rights delegations to Honduras and Guatemala in February. They heard and saw firsthand from people in various communities about the environmental, economic and political challenges they are confronting. Sophie and Wilber would like to share their experiences with you!

Come and be part of the conversation.

How can we better act in solidarity with the people of Central America?

How do charter cities, mining and hydroelectric dams threaten indigenous peoples?

How does violence affect people across the gender spectrum differently?

What has changed since the 2009 coup in Honduras?

What causes migration from Central America?

What is the US and the EU's role?
