CASE UPDATE

[With the support of international solidarity organizations] on June 18, 2014, seven Guatemalan men filed a lawsuit in Canada against Tahoe Resources seeking damages for injuries suffered during a shooting outside the company's Escobal silver mine in 2013. Tahoe's security personnel opened fire on residents of San Rafael Las Flores during a peaceful protest over concerns about the mine's potential impact on their water supply and the lack of meaningful and prior consultation with the community. They claim the shooting was “intentional” and a premeditated attempt by mine security personnel to “suppress” local opposition. The plaintiffs allege that Tahoe Resources implicitly or explicitly authorized the conduct of its security personnel.

Guatemalan Judge Orders Police to Bring Tahoe Resources Chairman Kevin McArthur to Court

By Sandra Cuffe [excerpted]

The Guatemalan national police director has been instructed by a judge to bring Tahoe Resources founder and executive chairman Kevin McArthur* to court on May 13 to testify about the criminalization of community leaders opposing the company's Escobal silver mine. The court order instructs the police to bring McArthur and [Tahoe VP of Operations] Donald Paul Gray to...testify in the trial of a prominent anti-mining community leader.

Over the past few years, dozens of community leaders and members opposing the Escobal project have been targeted with spurious criminal charges. Oscar Morales García, the outspoken coordinator of the Committee in Defense of Life and Peace of San Rafael Las Flores...is currently faced with a charge of uttering threats against Camilo Medina Mazariegos, Manager of External Relations for Minera San Rafael, a Guatemalan subsidiary of Tahoe Resources.

Morales García made a request to the Office of the Public Prosecutor in October 2014 for McArthur to “testify to the policy of criminalization that Minera San Rafael has been carrying out against community leaders in resistance to the imposition of the Escobal mining project in San Rafael Las Flores, Santa Rosa.”

*McArthur was previously CEO of both Goldcorp and Glamis, which have also been involved in mining abuses in Latin America.
